Read the passage below and answer questions 11 to 20.

(20 marks)

Jason gripped his iPad securely as he hurried down the corridor. He had devoted his time working on his presentation, and it was the day his hard work would finally pay off. Mrs Tay, his CCA teacher, had promised an extra reward to the first student to present, and Jason was determined to earn that.

As Jason neared the classroom, his steps quickened. However, a soft voice stopped him, "Jason?" He turned and saw Olivia standing near her classroom locker, tears pooling in her eyes. She clutched her backpack tightly, her face flushed with panic. "What's wrong?" Jason asked, glancing at his watch. 1:53 p.m. Seven minutes to the start of his CCA. If he hurried, he still had a chance to set up his iPad first.

Olivia explained her problem – the library book she had borrowed had gone missing. She had left it in the canteen the previous day, and now it was nowhere to be found. If it was not returned that day, she would be charged a replacement fee. That would certainly upset her parents. Her words tumbled out in a mix of worry and frustration. Jason frowned. Olivia would not have asked for help if she were not desperate. But he did not have time for this. "Have you checked the lost-and-found corner or the General Office?" he asked. She nodded, her lips trembling, "It's not there."

Jason adjusted his backpack. "Maybe someone will return it later," he muttered to himself, stepping toward the classroom. His initial instinct was to ignore her and keep moving. It was not his problem, and she should have been more careful with the book. Besides, he had a presentation ahead to focus on; helping her would just slow him down.

Olivia stood there, unsure of what to do next as Jason walked away. After taking a few steps, he stopped. Something nagged at him. He imagined himself in Olivia's shoes. Would he not feel the same way? Sighing, he turned back towards her and said, "Okay, let's check the canteen again." Olivia's eyes lit up, feeling encouraged by his response to help her search for her missing book.

The canteen was nearly empty, save for the faint clatter of dishes in the stalls and a cleaner mopping the floor. Jason scanned the common areas while Olivia checked the nearby tables and benches. His eyes landed on a corner near the bins when something caught his attention. "I think I see it!" Jason called out to her immediately, directing her attention to his discovery. Once she saw it – a slightly scuffed but intact book sitting on the floor – she bent down and held it to her chest.

"Thank you so much, Jason!" she exclaimed as relief washed over her face. "No problem," Jason said, glancing at the clock again. 2.05 p.m. Disappointed, he stood in silence for a while. There was no way he would be the first to present now. How did his big day end up like this?

Olivia walked towards him and spoke softly, "You're a lifesaver, Jason. I owe you one." Seeing the look of gratitude on her face, he realised something unexpected. The extra reward would have been nice, but knowing he had made Olivia's day mattered much more. It was not the kind of win he had planned for, but it felt good all the same.
